About Me

Everyone struggles with the question, "Who am I?"

I am one of the fortunate few who can answer that question with no hesitation. It brings me great joy to help others discover that truth for themselves...and to love it!

20 years as a life coach, counselor in private practice, facilitator, speaker and organizational development consultant have taught me a few things about what makes communication great and how to both choose, and change, one's path. It's all about discovering the truth about yourself and then learning to love it.

In group settings, I love playing with what makes a team great and how all our stories can work together so that profits and purpose are in alignment.
